

First Peoples Child & Family Review

An Interdisciplinary Journal Honouring the Voices, Perspectives, and Knowledges of First Peoples through Research, Critical Analyses, Stories, Standpoints and Media Reviews

Animkee

James Schlonies, M'Wikwedong Youth Group, Carlos E. Sanchez-Pimienta et Jeffrey Masuda

Volume 13, numéro 2, 2019

Special Issue: Audiovisual

URI : <https://id.erudit.org/iderudit/1082962ar>

DOI : <https://doi.org/10.7202/1082962ar>

Aller au sommaire du numéro

Éditeur(s)

First Nations Child and Family Caring Society of Canada

ISSN

1708-489X (imprimé)

2293-6610 (numérique)

Découvrir la revue

Citer ce document

Schlonies, J., M'Wikwedong Youth Group, Sanchez-Pimienta, C. E. & Masuda, J. (2019). Animkee. First Peoples Child & Family Review, 13(2), 10–10. <https://doi.org/10.7202/1082962ar>

Résumé de l'article

In my video, I (James Schlonies) tell the story of how I struggled when I was younger. I went through all mental health services available in my town, but sometimes I just felt worse after. When I was in grade 7, I started going to M'Wikwedong. My family and I received help from M'Wikwedong to cope with what I was going through. Drumming helped me learn to speak up for myself. Now I am a member of the Board of Directors at M'Wikwedong and I am an advocate for other youth in my area. This video was created through a research project entitled: Promoting healthy urban environments for young Indigenous peoples: The case of M'Wikwedong Native Cultural Resource Centre. The research team was formed by the M'Wikwedong Youth Group (Ryerson King, Kaitrina Harrisson, Steven Schlonies, Nikita Jones, and James Schlonies) and the Centre for Environmental Health Equity at Queen's University (Carlos Sanchez-Pimienta and Jeffrey Masuda). This video displays a previous iteration of the name of this project. M'Wikwedong recently changed its name to "M'Wikwedong Indigenous Friendship Centre."

An Interdisciplinary Journal

Honouring the Voices, Perspectives and Knowledges of First Peoples through Research, Critical Analyses, Stories, Standpoints and Media Reviews

Animkee

James Schlonies,¹ M'Wikwedong Youth Group,² Carlos E. Sanchez-Pimienta,³ and Jeffrey Masuda⁴

¹ Member, M'Wikwedong Youth Group, Ontario, Canada

² Collective of youth who provided input and support for the creation of this video

³ MSc, Research Assistant, School of Kinesiology and Health Studies, Queen's University, Ontario, Canada

⁴ PhD, Associate Professor, School of Kinesiology and Health Studies, Queen's University, Ontario, Canada

Corresponding author: jaschlonies@gmail.com

 Watch 2:35

Abstract

In my video, I (James Schlonies) tell the story of how I struggled when I was younger. I went through all mental health services available in my town, but sometimes I just felt worse after. When I was in grade 7, I started going to M'Wikwedong. My family and I received help from M'Wikwedong to cope with what I was going through. Drumming helped me learn to speak up for myself. Now I am a member of the Board of Directors at M'Wikwedong and I am an advocate for other youth in my area. This video was created through a research project entitled: Promoting healthy urban environments for young Indigenous peoples: The case of M'Wikwedong Native Cultural Resource Centre. The research team was formed by the M'Wikwedong Youth Group (Ryerson King, Kaitrina Harrison, Steven Schlonies, Nikita Jones, and James Schlonies) and the Centre for Environmental Health Equity at Queen's University (Carlos Sanchez-Pimienta and Jeffrey Masuda). This video displays a previous iteration of the name of this project. M'Wikwedong recently changed its name to "M'Wikwedong Indigenous Friendship Centre."