

“I get to know them as a whole person”: Family physician stories of proximity to patients experiencing social inequity

Monica Molinaro, Katrina Shen, Gina Agarwal, Gabrielle Inglis et Meredith Vanstone

Volume 11, numéro 1S, supplément, 2024

Congress 2023

URI : <https://id.erudit.org/iderudit/1110243ar>

DOI : <https://doi.org/10.26443/ijwpc.v11i1.402>

Aller au sommaire du numéro

Éditeur(s)

McGill University Library

ISSN

2291-918X (numérique)

Découvrir la revue

Citer ce document

Molinaro, M., Shen, K., Agarwal, G., Inglis, G. & Vanstone, M. (2024). “I get to know them as a whole person”: Family physician stories of proximity to patients experiencing social inequity. The International Journal of Whole Person Care, 11(1S), s25–s26. <https://doi.org/10.26443/ijwpc.v11i1.402>

© Monica Molinaro, Katrina Shen, Gina Agarwal, Gabrielle Inglis, Meredith Vanstone, 2024

Ce document est protégé par la loi sur le droit d’auteur. L’utilisation des services d’Érudit (y compris la reproduction) est assujettie à sa politique d’utilisation que vous pouvez consulter en ligne.

<https://apropos.erudit.org/fr/usagers/politique-dutilisation/>

érudit

Cet article est diffusé et préservé par Érudit.

Érudit est un consortium interuniversitaire sans but lucratif composé de l’Université de Montréal, l’Université Laval et l’Université du Québec à Montréal. Il a pour mission la promotion et la valorisation de la recherche.

<https://www.erudit.org/fr/>

"I GET TO KNOW THEM AS A WHOLE PERSON": FAMILY PHYSICIAN STORIES OF PROXIMITY TO PATIENTS EXPERIENCING SOCIAL INEQUITY

Monica Molinaro^{1*}, Katrina Shen¹, Gina Agarwal¹, Gabrielle Inglis¹, Meredith Vanstone¹

1* Corresponding author: Department of Family Medicine, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada
molinaml@mcmaster.ca

Keywords: Family medicine, Social inequities, Proximity

Canadians' health outcomes are inextricably tied to social inequities. While family medicine is aptly situated to provide care that addresses social factors through longitudinal knowledge of patients and their contexts, family physicians have come under increased pressure to do more for their patients with less time and resources due to financial and resource demands within primary care.

Nursing scholar Ruth Malone has argued that remaining proximal, or close to patients, is a form of resistance to these demands. Using a critical narrative methodology, we conducted 36 interviews with 20 family physicians working with persons experiencing health needs related to social inequity in Ontario, Canada, whose stories expressed and expanded upon Malone's proximity. Notions of proximity were invoked through descriptions of the role of family physicians in: i) generating physical proximity based on the patients' needs for more time, space, and care; ii) developing narrative proximity through storytelling over time, both between colleagues and patient communities; and iii) engaging in moral proximity, or recognizing the vulnerabilities of their patients, by going "above and beyond" in their care and advocacy roles inspired by the needs of their patients.

“I get to know them as a whole person”: family physician stories of proximity to patients experiencing social inequity
Monica Molinaro, Katrina Shen, Gina Agarwal, Gabrielle Inglis, Meredith Vanstone

The findings add theoretical depth to proximity, extending this conceptualization into a new clinical context. These stories also complement current health services and health policy research that advocates for collaborative primary care approaches, as elements of these approaches are conducive to establishing proximity with patients who need care the most. ■