

Ritual

Catherine St-Cyr

Volume 11, Number 2, 2024

Vulnerability in Medicine

URI: <https://id.erudit.org/iderudit/1112326ar>

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.26443/ijwpc.v11i2.444>

See table of contents

Publisher(s)

McGill University Library

ISSN

2291-918X (digital)

Explore this journal

Cite this document

St-Cyr, C. (2024). Ritual. The International Journal of Whole Person Care, 11(2), 30–31. <https://doi.org/10.26443/ijwpc.v11i2.444>

© Catherine St-Cyr, 2024

This document is protected by copyright law. Use of the services of Érudit (including reproduction) is subject to its terms and conditions, which can be viewed online.

<https://apropos.erudit.org/en/users/policy-on-use/>

érudit

This article is disseminated and preserved by Érudit.

Érudit is a non-profit inter-university consortium of the Université de Montréal, Université Laval, and the Université du Québec à Montréal. Its mission is to promote and disseminate research.

<https://www.erudit.org/en/>

RITUAL

Catherine St-Cyr

Department of Family Medicine, Faculty of Medicine and Health Sciences, McGill University, Montreal, Quebec, Canada trustwomen@gmail.com

KEYWORDS: Trauma-informed care

First we prepare the terrain.
Do you find speculum exams difficult?
We can premedicate. Sometimes that helps.

You have the power here. Say pause, or stop
I will immediately obey. Immediately.
I will say what I'm doing before I do it.
I will sit you up so you can be above me, looking down
I will check in with you verbally, and visually.
Hand you the speculum to demystify.
Here, move it around. Quack, quack.
Every word carefully chosen.
Let your knees fall to the side.
(Never anything you've heard in trauma.
Never say open your legs, I tell the residents)
And if you tell me to stop, it's not a failure.
It's a victory. You said no
And it was respected.
It's a triumph. Be proud. ■

Biographical note

Before medicine, the author was a counsellor and intervention worker. She retains a keen interest in the social sciences and is forever curious about the human condition.