Jean-Pierre Collin est agent de recherche à l'INRS-Urbanisation. Ses recherches actuelles portent sur les politiques montréalaises de revitalisation des quartiers anciens d'une part, et sur les mouvements sociaux urbains de la période 1930-1965, d'autre part. [Jean-Pierre Collin, INRS-Urbanisation, 3465, rue Durocher, Montréal, Québec, H2X 2C6].

Annick Germain est professeure à l'Institut d'urbanisme de l'Université de Montréal. Elle a publié en 1985, une analyse des mouvements de réforme urbaine à Montréal au tournant du siècle. [Annick Germain, Institut d'urbanisme, Université de Montréal, C.P. 6128, Succ. A, Montréal, Québec, H3C 3J7].

Fred Dahms is Professor, a founding member and former Chairman, Department of Geography, University of Guelph. During the last ten years he has published widely on the changing functions of small settlements in Ontario. A Social Sciences and Humanities Leave Fellowship has recently enabled him to extend this work to the rest of Eastern Canada. As Chairman of the City of Guelph Planning Advisory Committee, he has had the opportunity to apply many of his research results to contemporary planning problems. [Prof. F. Dahms, Department of Geography, University of Guelph, Guelph, Ontario, N1G 2W1].

Greg Marquis is a Ph.D. candidate in history at Queen's University, and studying the early twentieth century Toronto police department. He is also interested in nineteenth-century criminal justice topics, particularly in the Maritime provinces. [Mr. Greg Marquis, Department of History, Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, K7L 3N6].

James Lightbody is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Alberta. His research interests and publications lie in the realm of metropolitan reorganization, local government, structural reforms and the election strategies of municipal officials. [Prof. James Lightbody, Department of Political Science, The University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta, T6G 2H4].

David Walker is Associate Professor of Political Science, University of Winnipeg where he has taught since 1974. The author of the Great Winnipeg Dream, Dr. Walker has headed up several research projects covering many public policy issues including urban development, alcohol and drug abuse, economic development, education and training, transportation and cultural affairs. He comments regularly for the Winnipeg Free Press, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and C.T.V. networks. He has sat on several boards including the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. Dr. Walker has served as an adviser to the federal minister of employment, 1981-1983 and the minister of transport, 1983-1984. [Prof. David Walker, Department of Political Science, The University of Winnipeg, 515 Portage Avenue, Winnipeg, Manitoba, R3B 2E9].

Elizabeth Bloomfield is a private scholar who has taught geography and history at the Universities of Auckland, Guelph and Waterloo. One research interest has been the role of municipal elites in fostering urban-industrial growth in Ontario since 1870. She has also developed computer methods for accessing industrial data from the 1871 manuscript census of Canada and for bibliographic compilation, and contributes annual bibliographies of international and Canadian urban history to the Urban History Review.
